Boeing 747s, built for the Chicago-based Boeing Company, are the largest airliner in the world, making the first flight on May 25, 1958. These pressurized, four-engine airplanes, built with aluminum alloys and strengthened by internal stiffeners and external frames, have replaced the conventional, three-engine, piston-powered Boeing Stratocruiser as the Boeing 747's replacement. The Boeing 747 is the largest production passenger jet in the world today, and the largest aircraft ever produced. The Boeing 747 is the largest commercial aircraft by wingspan ever built, at 230 feet 11 inches (70.9 m) with an overall length of 214 ft 9 in (65.5 m) and powered by four engines. 22 Mar 2012 The Boeing Company has proposed to the FAA that it stop flying its iconic Boeing 747 cargo aircraft. The first Boeing 747s were intended as cargo planes, but soon after the first planes were built, the FAA started allowing airlines to use them for passenger service. The last passenger-configured Boeing 747 left the fleet of United Airlines in 2010. The New York Times reports that the company is planning to introduce its first new Boeing 747 for cargo operations later this year. Boeing is the world's largest producer of commercial passenger jets, but its 747 jet has been losing money in recent years as airlines have moved to smaller and more fuel-efficient aircraft. The company had hoped to compete with rival Airbus by offering its 747-8i for passenger flights, but the aircraft was not
